Situated in the beautiful seaside town of Porthcawl, Abbeyfield House is a retirement home offering sheltered housing for older people who would like to remain independent without the worry of having to maintain their own home, with support on hand when they need it.

Our beautiful home has eight studio flats and was built in 1989. The whole house is wheelchair accessible and is the ideal retirement home for retired people who are looking for companionship and support.

We're in a great location with a bus stop close by to the house for those who are looking to get out and about to explore, local shops, a post office and the town centre are only half a mile from the house too.

Let us take care of you

Our house manager and the team are on hand 7 days a week throughout the year to ensure our resident's safety. It is our number one priority.

We work with professional contractors to ensure Abbeyfield Porthcawl is always well-maintained, safe and compliant with health and safety legislation. We have a community alarm system, monitored 24 hours a day, and our fire alarm is tested regularly and remotely monitored, too.

Simple monthly fees

We make life as worry-free as possible, residents pay one convenient, all-inclusive monthly direct debit that covers rent, service charges, food, utilities and maintenance. We also take care of the council tax, TV licence fee and alarm charge.

Payments are reviewed annually, and – since we're a not-for-profit housing association – we keep our fees fair and affordable. If we make a surplus, it's reinvested into the organisation to improve the services we bring you.

Extra support?

Autonomy and privacy are important for your independence, so we let you take care of your own laundry and keep your room clean and tidy. You'll also look after your personal care and any medications. But if you'd like support in any of these areas, we can help you make arrangements for third party providers to help out.
